Main Food Suppliers

In Chad, sugar, cereals as millet (sorghum), rice and peanuts are produced locally, mainly for family subsistence in the south part of the country. Due to lack of storage infrastructure and organizational structure, the trading of cereals is hardly practiced by local population. In addition, lack of road infrastructures makes the handling and transport of cereals very costly. However, commercial quantities of rice can be found, but at very high cost. The table below shows some examples of rice prices practiced in Chad.
